4. Invest in medical research. While there is no doubt that the medical profession has made great strides in the treatment of cancer, much more research is needed to develop effective treatments for the most common types of cancer. The National Cancer Institute (NCI) is the primary federal agency for cancer research, and it has a long history of funding innovative research. In 2004, the NCI announced a new initiative to support research on the prevention and early detection of cancer.
